 NAACLS Staff Notes: When NAACLS last reviewed this program, it participated in the "Approval" process. The Approval process was a quality assurance process that focused exclusively on a self-study document, with no site visit. As of the April 21st, 2022, Board of Directors' meeting, NAACLS has retired the Approval quality assurance process and re-classified Approval programs as Accredited. Moving forward, Phlebotomy and Medical Laboratory Assistant programs will participate in an Accreditation review process, where a self-study and site visit is required, consistent with all other NAACLS Accredited educational disciplines.*

The NAACLS Board of Directors awarded Approval programs a maximum of five years if it met the following requirements:

- No partial or non-compliance citations in the current review cycle.*
- No non-compliance citations and up to two partial citations in the previous review cycle.*
- No period of inactivity or probationary status during the last period of approval.*

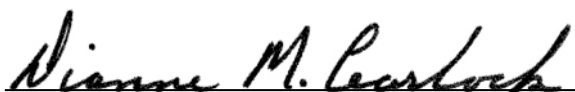

At the time of review, this program met all those requirements and received the maximum award available.

This program requested a one year extension to their original end accreditation date, April 30th, 2022. The extension will be deducted from their next award.

In order to accommodate the transition from approval review to accreditation review, this program has also been given a six month courtesy extension. This extension will not be deducted off their next award.
